

CRS Ethiopia

Farmer-to-Farmer Team

Tatek Woldu is a Livestock development and food security expert with 15+ years of experience in agricultural research, international cooperation, and project management. With M.Sc. degree in Animal and Range science and Doctoral degree in Agricultural sciences, Tatek is focused on capacity development of agribusinesses, improving food security of farmers at individual and household levels as well as facilitating partnership and international cooperation.

Lidia Retta is a Senior Project Officer with ten years of experience working in government institutions, the private sector, and international non-governmental organizations. She studied agriculture and specialized in development studies. Lidia has a wide range of experience in program management, development procedures, tracking project performance, report writing, monitoring and evaluation, and follow-up on project activities. Born and raised in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, she has been fortunate to travel extensively across Ethiopia and be exposed to a spectrum of traditions and cultures while working in CRS's Farmer-to-Farmer program. All of this has contributed to her development as an individual and her ambitions as a person dreaming to bring radical change in the areas of agriculture and development.
